Greetings, I am an avid WoW player for 8 years and I know that Vanilla is the best WoW era as far as the raiding scene is concerned. However, with the arrival of Cataclysm and MoP, the number of players has decreased, leading to a huge population of players stuck on a server with very low population. I have found the most popular places for WoW players to go, given their PvE experience (questing and farming), are as follows. 1. PvP and Battlegrounds - Tier 2 to 25 are popular for PvP players. There are also servers for everyone on almost every battleground. Since PvP has no set questing in vanilla, many people go to battlegrounds and PvE together. 2. Player Strongholds - The old NPC stations are known to be popular with the player housing people. 3. Rated Battlegrounds - These are popular but fewer players tend to play them because they are not as organized as battlegrounds. There are two battlegrounds in each rating bracket and these are balanced according to how many players are in each area. 4. Raiding - T4 to T9 are the most popular and are usually easier. From T10, the difficulty is also increased to make the content more challenging. T11 and T12 are also popular but can be really difficult to get into. In T13 and T14, there are some difficult bosses that are not very easy to kill. But from T15 to T25, the bosses are easier but there are not many monsters in the area. Note that the above is a statistical analysis on how people play WoW, and not an absolute value. For example, T2 on a PVP server may not have the same population as T8 on a PvE server. Here are the WoW Armory statistics for Blizzard's Vanilla servers and current servers. Hello, I have some help for those new to WoW! This is my very first guide.
